Judgement

Valmiki J Mehta, J.—By this writ petition, the petitioners who were working as supervisors in the respondent no. 3 company/National Bicycle Corporation of India Ltd. seek implementation of the order dated 16.7.1990 issued by respondent no. 1/Union of India so that the petitioners are entitled to a higher scale of pay. Counsel appearing for the respondent nos. 2 and 3 has referred to me the subsequent communication dated 19.10.1990 of the respondent no. 1 to the respondent no. 2, in which, it is clarified that the scales given in terms of the earlier letter dated 16.7.1990 to Junior Officers and Deputy Managers stand deleted from the office order dated 16.7.1990.

2. A reference to the writ petition, and particularly to para 5, shows that the petitioners as supervisors are claiming equivalence to Junior Officers and therefore, higher pay scale in terms of order dated 16.7.1990. Since the petitioners rely on the order dated 16.7.1990, which provided for upgraded pay-scale of Junior Officers, however, since this office order qua the up-gradation of a pay-scale of Junior Officers itself has been subsequently modified by the letter dated 19.10.1990 by deleting the entry pertaining to Junior Officers, therefore, the petitioners who claim equivalence to Junior Officers in their scale of pay in term of the order dated 16.7.1990 cannot succeed.

3. Counsel for the respondent no. 3 also informs this Court that all the petitioners during the pendency of the writ petition, have taken voluntary retirement and they have taken the VRS benefits without reserving any right as claimed in the writ petition. If that be so, petitioners would also be estopped in claiming of rights as claimed in this petition. The issue in the present case is fully covered by my recent judgment in the case of R. Kothandaraman Vs. The Speaker, Lok Sabha Secretariat & Anr. in W.P. (C) No. 7132/2009 decided on 10.1.2013 and which holds that a person who accepts lumpsum benefits under the voluntary retirement Scheme and utilizes the same, such person cannot challenge the issue of voluntary retirement. Paras 4 to 14 of the said judgment are relevant and which read as under:-

4. On behalf of the petitioner it has been argued that it is settled law that a person can always withdraw his request for voluntary retirement before the specific cut-off date given whereby the voluntary retirement would become effective. Reliance is placed upon the judgments of the Supreme Court in the cases of Balram Gupta Vs. Union of India (UOI) and Anr, ; Shambhu Murari Sinha Vs. Project and Development India and Another, and J.N. Srivastava Vs. Union of India (UOI) and Another, . On the basis of the judgment in the case of Balram Gupta (supra) it is argued that the petitioner was always entitled to withdraw his request for voluntary retirement on or before 6.9.2008 and which was done vide letter dated 11.7.2008. It is argued on the basis of Balram Gupta (supra) that the reason given of the wife not wanting the voluntary retirement of the petitioner is a justifiable reason seeking withdrawal of the request of voluntary retirement. The judgment in the case of Shambhu Murari Sinha (supra) is cited for the proposition that even after the acceptance of the voluntary retirement request is communicated to the petitioner, yet, the request for voluntary retirement can always be withdrawn before the final cut-off date. J.N. Srivastava (supra) case also holds the same as the judgments in the cases of Balram Gupta (supra) and Shambhu Murari Sinha (supra).

5. In view of the judgments cited on behalf of the petitioner it cannot be disputed that the petitioner was always entitled to withdraw his request for voluntary retirement prior to the date of the voluntary retirement i.e. 6.9.2008. The petitioner had in fact sought withdrawal of his request for voluntary retirement vide his letter dated 11.7.2008, i.e. well before 6.9.2008. Therefore, the petitioner was justified in his request for withdrawal of the request for voluntary retirement and the respondents were bound to accept the request inasmuch as refusal of the wife to agree to the voluntary retirement is a good ground in view of the observations of the Supreme Court in Balram Gupta's (supra) case which holds that pressure of friends and relatives to withdraw a request is a legitimate ground for withdrawing of a request for voluntary retirement.

6. However, the respondents argue that on one hand the petitioner kept on challenging the refusal of the respondents to prevent the petitioner from withdrawing his request of voluntary retirement, however, the petitioner in fact received all the terminal benefits on retiring on 7.9.2008, and which terminal benefits were credited in his bank account. The respondents relied upon the letter dated 15.10.2008 written by the petitioner to the respondents accepting the terminal benefits and therefore it is argued that the petitioner is estopped. The letter dated 15.10.2008 reads as under:-

No. GLA/SECY/2008

15th October 2008

To

The Additional Secretary (Admn)

(Shri R.C. Ahuja)

Lok Sabha Secretariat

Parliament House Annexe

New delhi 110 001

Sir,

Thank you very much for expediting the payment of my long pending terminal benefits into my bank account. I am grateful to you for your fine gestures.

I take occasion to offer my apologies to all concerned for being harsh in requesting for the above payments, but until that time, you may appreciate that things were not moving.

Yours faithfully,

(R. KOTHANDARAMAN)

7. The respondents relied upon the judgments of the Supreme Court in the case of Bank of India and Others Vs. O.P. Swarnakar etc., as also the judgments of the Supreme Court in the cases of Punjab National Bank Vs. Virender Kumar Goel and Others, and Bank of India and Others Vs. Pale Ram Dhanial, . On the basis of para 130 point 1 of the judgment in the Bank of India vs. O.P. Swarnakar (supra) it is argued that once an employee such as the petitioner takes benefit of the voluntary retirement by utilizing the amounts which have been credited to his account, such an employee is estopped from seeking withdrawal of his request of voluntary retirement. The other two judgments cited on behalf of the respondents hold similarly.

8. In my opinion, the contention which is raised on behalf of the respondents has to succeed inasmuch as the petitioner cannot blow hot and cold in the same breath. Petitioner cannot on one hand seek withdrawal of his request for voluntary retirement yet on the other hand withdraw/utilize and enjoy the lumpsum benefits such as provident fund, gratuity and commutation of pay which has been credited to his account.

9. On the query raised upon the petitioner as also his counsel who had argued the case on 2.1.2013 it could not be disputed that the petitioner has utilized the amounts which were credited in his account towards terminal benefits which are lumpsum benefits such as provident fund, gratuity and commutation of pay. The Supreme Court clearly in the judgments in the cases of Bank of India (Supra) and Punjab National Bank (supra) has held that once a person takes benefit of voluntary retirement, such person is estopped thereafter from challenging his voluntary retirement.

10. On behalf of the petitioner it was sought to be argued that the judgments in the cases of Bank of India (supra) and Punjab National Bank (supra) cited on behalf of the respondents cannot apply because those decisions pertain to a contractual voluntary retirement scheme whereas in the present case, the voluntary retirement is pursuant to a statutory provision being Rule 48A. Paragraphs 102 to 104 and 119 in Bank of India (supra) case are relied upon by the petitioner to argue that the Supreme Court in Bank of India (supra) case was not concerned with the statutory provision entitling voluntary retirement. In response, counsel for the respondents have relied upon paras 116 to 118 of the judgment in Bank of India (supra) case to argue that if a statutory Rule is made for personal benefit of a person, and there is no element of public interest involved, a right created under a statutory Rule can be waived on account of estoppel.

11. On behalf of the petitioner reliance is then placed upon the judgment of a learned Single Judge of the Andhra Pradesh High Court in the case of V. Vishnu Vardhan Reddy Vs. Andhra Bank (A Govt. of India Undertaking) Personnal Department and The General Manager, Andhra Bank, Personnal Department, , to argue that once there is an entitlement of withdrawal from voluntary retirement, then petitioner has to continue in service and that Court can direct for refund of the dues taken by an employee pursuant to the voluntary retirement.

12. In my opinion, the respondents must succeed on the principle of estoppel inasmuch as it makes no difference whether the retirement is pursuant to a contractual voluntary scheme or pursuant to a statutory Rule inasmuch as if Rule 48A is statutory, the provision of Section 115 of the Evidence Act which deals with the principle of estoppel is also a statutory provision. The principle of estoppel is based on the ground of equity that no one can take advantage of a fact and thereafter turn around to say that the situation should be reversed. Equity does not permit such an action of blowing hot and cold by a person. In the present case, since entitlement pursuant to Rule 48A of seeking voluntary retirement is personal to the petitioner there is no element of public policy involved and therefore the petitioner was entitled to waive the rights under Rule 48A of seeking the withdrawal of his request of voluntary retirement by accepting and utilizing the terminal lumpsum benefits given pursuant to the retirement. I am unable to agree with the judgment in the case of Vishnu Vardhan Reddy (supra) of Andhra Pradesh High Court inasmuch as the cited judgment does not refer to judgments in the case of Punjab National Bank and Pale Ram Dhanial (supra) wherein the issue of estoppel has squarely been dealt with. In para 11 of the Punjab National Bank's case it has been held that on taking benefits pursuant to a voluntary retirement a person is estopped from withdrawing from the voluntary retirement. Paras 10 and 11 of the judgment in the case of Punjab National Bank (supra) are relevant and they read as under:-

10. In our view this contention would be of no assistance to the respondent. He knew very well that the money deposited in his account was part of the benefits under the Scheme. He also knew it very well that his request for VRS was accepted after the Scheme had expired, yet he had withdrawn the amount deposited and utilized the same. The fact that the respondent had withdrawn a part of the benefit under the Scheme is not disputed and it could not be. To substantiate the contention, the applicant has submitted a photocopy of the respondent's Bank Account No. 27980 (Annexure R-1). It clearly appears from Annexure R-1 that a part of the retirement benefit was deposited in the respondent's Bank Account on 12-1-2001 and on 15-1-2001 he had withdrawn rupees three lakhs. Again on 28-2-2001 he had withdrawn rupees fifty thousand.

11. This fact, however, was not brought to the notice of this Court at the time of the hearing. However, the fact remains that the incumbent had accepted the benefits under the Scheme and utilization thereof would squarely be covered by Direction 1 as notice above. Therefore, the judgment dated 17-12-2002 is reviewed to the extent that the appeal arising out of the judgment and order of the Uttaranchal High Court is dismissed and the judgment of the High Court is upheld.

13. In Pale Ram Dhanial's (supra) case, the Supreme Court has observed as under:-

1. It is not disputed that the appellant Bank introduced a Voluntary Retirement Scheme, 2000 (herein referred to as "the Scheme") for its employees which had the approval of its Board of Directors. The Scheme was operative w.e.f. November 15, 2000 to December 14, 2000 for the employees who sought voluntary retirement. It is not disputed that the respondent herein who was an employee of the appellant Bank sought voluntary retirement under the Scheme on November 30, 2000. It is also not disputed that on December 2, 2000 he wrote to the Bank for withdrawal of his application for voluntary retirement. On January 22, 2001, the appellant Bank accepted the request for voluntary retirement of the respondent. Further, on January 25, 2001, the respondent withdrew the retiral benefits deposited in the Bank in his name as per voluntary retirement. It appears that the respondent changed his mind after the respondent was relieved from the employment and he filed a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution challenging the acceptance of his request for voluntary retirement. A learned Single Judge of the High Court allowed the petition and set aside the acceptance of the application for voluntary retirement submitted by the respondent. Aggrieved, the appellants preferred a letters patent appeal which was dismissed. It is against the said judgment, the appellants are in appeal before us.

2. A Bench of three Judges of this Court in Punjab National Bank Vs. Virender Kumar Goel and Others, , has held that an employee who sought voluntary retirement and subsequently wrote for its withdrawal but has withdrawn the amount of retiral benefits as per the Voluntary Retirement Scheme, is not entitled to the withdrawal of his application for voluntary retirement. It is not disputed that in the present case the respondent herein withdrew the amount of retiral benefits on January 25, 2001.

3. For the aforesaid reason, this appeal deserves to be allowed. We order accordingly. The order and judgment under challenge is set aside. There shall be no order as to costs.

C.A. Nos. 4099, 4100 of 2002 and 8833 of 2003

4. In view of the above order passed in C.A. No. 4098 of 2002, these appeals are also allowed. The orders and judgments under challenge are set aside. There shall be no order as to costs.

(underlining added)

14. In view of the aforesaid discussion, I hold that though the petitioner had validly revoked his request for voluntary retirement and which withdrawal was valid in view of the judgments of the Supreme Court in the case of Balram Gupta (supra), Shambu Murari Sinha (supra) and J.N. Srivastava (supra) cited on behalf of the petitioner, however the petitioner is estopped in view of the sub para 1 of para 130 of the judgment in Bank of India's (supra) case and paras 10 and 11 of the judgment in Punjab National Bank's (supra) case and Pale Ram Dhanias case to withdraw from his request seeking voluntary retirement. At the cost of repetition it is necessary to be stated that the petitioner does not dispute the fact that the lumpsum amounts credited in his bank account including towards provident fund, gratuity and commutation of pay have been withdrawn and utilized by the petitioner. If the petitioner had only utilized the amounts credited in his account for withdrawing monthly salary which was due to the petitioner from time to time then in such a case possibly it could have been argued that the principle of estoppel cannot apply, however, in the present case the issue is not of withdrawal of amounts every month (whether as pension or as salary) but the issue is of utilizing and taking benefit of lumpsum amounts which were deposited in the account of the petitioner on account of provident fund, gratuity and commutation of pay.

4. Therefore, in the facts and circumstances of the present case, once the voluntary retirement is taken by the petitioners and they have taken it without reserving any right as claimed in the writ petition, the petitioners also would be estopped in claiming any reliefs in the writ petition. For both the foregoing reasons, the writ petition is dismissed, leaving the parties to bear their own costs.
