

(2014) 07 DEL CK 0371

In the Delhi High Court

Case No : Crl. M.C. No. 2976 of 2014

Vishnu Kumar and Others

APPELLANT

Vs

State and Others

RESPONDENT

Date of Decision : 11-07-2014

Acts Referred:

Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 (CrPC) — Section 320, 482
Penal Code, 1860 (IPC) — Section 307, 34, 406, 498-A

Citation : (2015) 1 JCC 398

Hon'ble Judges : Sudershan Kumar Misra, J

Bench : Single Bench

Advocate : Ashwani Tripathi, Advocates for the Appellant; Nishi Jain, A.P.P., B.P. Singh, Adv. and Randhir, S.I, Advocates for the Respondent

Judgement

Sudershan Kumar Misra, J.—This petition has been moved under Section 482 Cr.P.C. praying that F.I.R. No. 623/2013 registered under Sections 406, 498-A, 34 I.P.C. at Police Station Aman Vihar, Delhi, against the petitioners by respondent No. 2 Sapna, be quashed since the parties have amicably settled their disputes and differences by entering into a Settlement Agreement on 11.02.2014 before the Delhi Mediation Centre, Rohini District Courts, Delhi. A certified copy of the Agreement settling the matter has also been annexed to this petition; terms and conditions, upon which the matter has been settled, have already been spelt out therein. A perusal of the same shows that petitioner No. 1, Vishnu Kumar and the complainant, Sapna, who is arrayed as second respondent to this petition and who happens to be his wife, have now resolved their differences and started living together ever since 17.01.2014 at a residence separate from their respective families, and that they do not have any grievance left against each other. The affidavit of second respondent, Sapna, is also annexed to this petition. The other petitioners, all of whom are accused in the aforesaid F.I.R., have appended their own affidavits to this petition. All the parties are present in person in Court and they are duly identified by their respective counsel.

2. Looking to the circumstances, and the fact that the parties have reconciled their differences; and specially the fact that petitioner No. 1 Vishnu and the complainant, Sapna, have decided to preserve their marriage; and that the complainant is no longer willing to support the prosecution; to my mind, it is a fit case where the matter should be given quietus.

3. Additional Public Prosecutor appearing for the State also agrees to this position.

4. Consequently, in view of the above; and looking at the ratio of the decision in Gian Singh Vs. State of Punjab and Another, which has referred to a number of matters for the proposition that even a non-compoundable offence can also be quashed on the ground of a settlement agreement between the offender and the victim, if the circumstances so warrant; and also Narinder Singh and Others Vs. State of Punjab and Another, where the Supreme Court held as follows:-

"31. In view of the aforesaid discussion, we sum up and lay down the following principles by which the High Court would be guided in giving adequate treatment to the settlement between the parties and exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code while accepting the settlement and quashing the proceedings or refusing to accept the settlement with direction to continue with the criminal proceedings:

(I) Power conferred under Section 482 of the Code is to be distinguished from the power which lies in the Court to compound the offences under Section 320 of the Code. No doubt, under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent power to quash the criminal proceedings even in those cases which are not compoundable, where the parties have settled the matter between themselves. However, this power is to be exercised sparingly and with caution.

(II) When the parties have reached the settlement and on that basis petition for quashing the criminal proceedings is filed, the guiding factor in such cases would be to secure:

(i) ends of justice, or

(ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court.

While exercising the power the High Court is to form an opinion on either of the aforesaid two objectives.

(III) Such a power is not to be exercised in those prosecutions which involve heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. Such offences are not private in nature and have a serious impact on society. Similarly, for offences alleged to have been committed under special statute like the Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by Public Servants, while working in that capacity are not to be quashed merely on the basis of compromise between the victim and the offender.

(IV) On the other, those criminal cases having overwhelmingly and predominantly civil character, particularly those arising out of commercial transactions or arising out of matrimonial relationship or family disputes should be quashed when the parties have resolved their entire disputes among themselves.

(V) While exercising its powers, the High Court is to examine as to whether the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal cases would put the accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal cases.

(VI) Offences under Section 307 Indian Penal Code would fall in the category of heinous and serious offences and therefore is to be generally treated as crime against the society and not against the individual alone. However, the High Court would not rest its decision merely because there is a mention of Section 307 Indian Penal Code in the F.I.R. or the charge is framed under this provision. It would be open to the High Court to examine as to whether incorporation of Section 307 Indian Penal Code is there for the sake of it or the prosecution has collected sufficient evidence, which if proved, would lead to proving the charge under Section 307 Indian Penal Code. For this purpose, it would be open to the High Court to go by the nature of injury sustained, whether such injury is inflicted on the vital/delegate parts of the body, nature of weapons used etc. Medical report in respect of injuries suffered by the victim can generally be the guiding factor. On the basis of this prima facie analysis, the High Court can examine as to whether there is a strong possibility of conviction or the chances of conviction are remote and bleak. In the former case it can refuse to accept the settlement and quash the criminal proceedings whereas in the later case it would be permissible for the High Court to accept the plea compounding the offence based on complete settlement between the parties. At this stage, the Court can also be swayed by the fact that the settlement between the parties is going to result in harmony between them which may improve their future relationship.

(VII) While deciding whether to exercise its power under Section 482 of the Code or not, timings of settlement play a crucial role. Those cases where the settlement is arrived at immediately after the alleged commission of offence and the matter is still under investigation, the High Court may be liberal in accepting the settlement to quash the criminal proceedings/investigation. It is because of the reason that at this stage the investigation is still on and even the charge sheet has not been filed. Likewise, those cases where the charge is framed but the evidence is yet to start or the evidence is still at infancy stage, the High Court can show benevolence in exercising its powers favourably, but after prima facie assessment of the circumstances/material mentioned above. On the other hand, where the prosecution evidence is almost complete or after the conclusion of the evidence the matter is at the stage of argument, normally the High Court should refrain from exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code, as in such cases the trial court would be in a position to decide the case finally on merits and to come a conclusion as to whether the offence under Section 307

Indian Penal Code is committed or not. Similarly, in those cases where the conviction is already recorded by the trial court and the matter is at the appellate stage before the High Court, mere compromise between the parties would not be a ground to accept the same resulting in acquittal of the offender who has already been convicted by the trial court. Here charge is proved under Section 307 Indian Penal Code and conviction is already recorded of a heinous crime and, therefore, there is no question of sparing a convict found guilty of such a crime."

I am of the opinion that no useful purpose would be served in continuing the proceedings and the same deserve to be quashed.

5. Accordingly, the petition is allowed and F.I.R. No. 623/2014 registered under Sections 498-A, 406, 34 I.P.C. at Police Station Aman Vihar, Delhi and all the proceedings emanating therefrom, are hereby quashed. The petition stands disposed off.