Judgement

Dr. S. Muralidhar, J.—These are two appeals filed by the assessee, Vodafone South Ltd. (formerly known as "Vodafone Essar South Ltd." and earlier to that as Hutchison Essar South Ltd.) under section 260A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ("the 1961 Act"), against a common order dated February 7, 2014, passed by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal ("the ITAT") in I.T.A. Nos. 4146/Del/2011 and 91/Del/2011 for the assessment years ("the AYs") 2002-03 and 2003-04, respectively. The assessee is engaged in the business of providing cellular services in the Delhi Region. The assessee actually commenced its business from June, 2002. During the assessment year 2002-03, the assessee availed of financing facilities from the HSBC Bank, Barakhamba Branch, New Delhi. HSBC's sanction letter dated August 2, 2001, a copy of which has been placed on record, offered the assessee a combined credit limit of Rs. 340 crores. The fixed rate of interest was 11.5 per cent for the first year but the letter mentioned that this was "an indicative rate and will be firmed up closer to date of drawdown". The interest was payable quarterly. The terms and conditions set out in the appendix to the said sanction letter stated, inter alia, that the assessee could advance the funds availed of by it to any other concern, other than in the usual course of business, after receiving the bank's prior approval.

2. By a board resolution dated November 5, 2001, it was resolved that the assessee would make available to its holding company, Sterling Cellular Ltd. (SQL), a sum of Rs. 100 crores on terms and conditions to be decided by the director of the assessee. The assessee has placed on record a copy of the relevant statement of account which shows that an amount of Rs. 25 crores was availed of by the assessee as a loan from HSBC at 11.60 per cent interest per annum on December 24, 2001. Immediately thereafter, on that very date, the assessee advanced a loan of Rs. 25 crores to SCL. A letter from SCL dated April 15, 2008, addressed to the assessee confirms that the aforementioned loan of Rs. 25 crores was disbursed to it by the assessee at 11.75 per cent interest per annum.

3. The assessee filed its return for the assessment year 2002-03 on October 30, 2002, declaring a loss of Rs. 35,69,97,065, which it subsequently revised at a profit of Rs. 1,00,690. In the revised return filed on December 2, 2003, the assessee showed income from other sources after adjusting interest expenses of Rs. 77.86 lakhs.

4. For the assessment year 2003-04, the assessee filed its return on December 2, 2003, declaring a loss of Rs. 2,62,87,59,740. The Assessing Officer ("the AO") by an order March 29, 2006, ruled that for the assessment year 2003-04 the assessee had received interest in the sum of Rs. 81,00,165 on the loan advanced and had sought to set it off against the interest expenses. Referring to the decision of the Supreme Court in Tuticorin Alkali Chemicals and Fertilizers Ltd., Madras Vs. Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras, , the Assessing Officer held that setting off the interest income of the pre-operative period against the interest expense was not allowed. It was held that "interest expense will form part of the pre-operative expenses pending capitalization and the interest income will be taxed separately as "Income from other sources." The interest income of Rs. 81,00,165 was added to the income of the assessee for the assessment year 2003-04.

5. As far as the return for the assessment year 2002-03 was concerned, the Assessing Officer issued a notice under section 148 of the Act on March 28, 2006, in response to which the assessee stated that the revised return already filed on December 2, 2003, may be treated as return in compliance with the said notice. The Assessing Officer by an order dated December 29, 2006, disallowed the set off on the ground that there was no nexus between the earning of the interest income by the assessee and the payment of the interest to the bank on the loans borrowed by it for business purposes. The Assessing Officer observed that the total loans raised by the assessee as on March 31, 2002, for the purpose of its business was Rs. 598,01,05,218 and "since the assessee had surplus funds, part of these funds of Rs. 25 crores" had been given to SCL. The Assessing Officer referred to the decision in Tuticorin Alkali (supra) and held that the interest paid to the bank would have been treated as business expenses but since the business was yet to commence they would form part of the preoperative expenses to be capitalized. The interest earned from advancing of the loan to SCL would be taxed separately as income from other sources. The Assessing Officer, accordingly, made an addition of Rs. 78,86,987 to the income of the assessee for the assessment year 2002-03.

6. The assessee took the matter in appeal to the Commissioner of Income-tax ("the CIT(A)"). The Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) by separate orders dated October 13, 2010, for the assessment year 2003-04 and July 15, 2011, for the assessment year 2002-03 concurred with the corresponding orders of the Assessing Officer. The Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) held that "there is no nexus between the expenditure incurred and the income sought to be earned in the instant case". Observing that the interest expense related to the pre-operative period and the giving of loan to SCL was not the business activity of the assessee, the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) held that SCL on its own could have approached the bank for loan.

7. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal passed the impugned common order in the two appeals filed by the assessee for the assessment years 2002-03 and 2003-04. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal noted that the assessee had commenced its business only in June, 2002. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal adopted the Assessing Officer's finding that the assessee had made a total borrowing of Rs. 598,01,05,218 up to March 31, 2002, and that it was out of the aforementioned total borrowings that a sum of Rs. 25 crores had been advanced and interest earned thereon. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal too observed that the assessee was not engaged in the business of money-lending. The interest income earned by the assessee was to be considered under the head "Income from other business". The assessee's contention that the interest expenditure incurred should be netted off against the interest income was held to be "not sustainable."

8. This court, while admitting these appeals on July 8, 2014, framed the following question of law:

"Did the Tribunal fail into error of law in holding that the expenditure on interest claimed by the assessee could not be allowed in terms of section 57(iii) of the Income-tax Act, 1961?"

9. This court has heard the submissions of Mr. Kavin Gulati, learned senior counsel for the assessee, and Mr. Kamal Sawhney, learned senior standing counsel for the Revenue.

10. Before discussing the facts of the case, it may be noticed that the provision in the Indian Income Act, 1922 ("the 1922 Act"), corresponding to section 57(iii) of the Act was section 12. In Eastern Investments Ltd. Vs. Commissioner of Income Tax, West Bengal, the appellant was an investment company originally formed for acquiring, holding and otherwise dealing with shares and Government securities which belonged to one Lord Cable. The share capital of the company was Rs. 250 lakhs, and the majority of its shares, including 50,000 ordinary shares of the face value of Rs. 50 lakhs were held by Lord Cable and the rest of the shares were held by his nominees. Upon the death of Lord Cable, one Mr. Geoffrey Lacy Scott was appointed as administrator of his estate and held the said 50,000 shares in question in that capacity. Since money was urgently needed by the executors of Lord Cable, an agreement was reached between the administrator and the company under which the latter agreed to reduce its share capital of Rs. 50 lakhs by taking over from Mr. Scott the 50,000 shares at the rate of Rs. 100 per share. Mr. Scott on his part agreed to receive debentures of the face value of Rs. 50 lakhs carrying interest at 5 per cent per annum issued by the company which were redeemable at the option of the registered holder at any time. The company sought to adjust the 5 per cent interest paid to Mr. Scott against its income under section 12(2) of the 1922 Act by treating it as "expenditure incurred solely for the purpose of making or earning such income, profits or gains".

11. After the company lost both before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal and the High Court, it appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court in Eastern Investments Ltd. (supra), inter alia, held that it was not necessary, for the purposes of section 12(2) of the 1922 Act to show that the expenditure was a profitable one or that in fact any profit was earned. It was enough to show that "the money was expended not of necessity and with a view to a direct and immediate benefit to the trade but voluntarily and on the ground of commercial expediency, and in order indirectly to facilitate the carrying on of the business". It was further held that the mere fact that the conversion had the effect of diminishing the taxable income of the company was not a proper consideration particularly when the transaction was not challenged on the ground of fraud. The court further explained that (page 5): "most commercial transactions are entered into for the mutual benefit of both sides, or at any rate each side hopes to gain something for itself. The test for the present purpose is not whether the other party benefited, nor indeed whether this was a prudent transaction which resulted in ultimate gain to the appellant but whether it was properly entered into as a part of the appellant's legitimate commercial undertakings in order indirectly to facilitate the carrying on of its business".

12. Analysing the clauses of the agreement in question in that case, the Supreme Court in Eastern Investments Ltd. (supra) held as under (page 5):

"The matter is clearly 'writ in the bond'. Moreover, we do not think that this inquiry is relevant, for we are dealing with a question of income-tax and not judging the legality or propriety of the transaction on an application to reduce the capital of the company. The only question is whether this was done in the ordinary course of business for the purposes we have already pointed out however mistaken the directors and shareholders of the company may have been."

13. Ultimately, the Supreme Court, while allowing the appeal, observed that "there are usually many ways in which a given thing can be brought about in business circles but it is not for the court to decide which of them should have been employed when the court is deciding a question under section 12(2) of the Income-tax Act".

14. Subsequently, in Commissioner of Income Tax, West Bengal-III Vs. Rajendra Prasad Moody, the Supreme Court addressed the question whether interest paid on money borrowed for investment in shares would be allowable as expenditure under section 57(iii) even where such shares had not yielded any dividend during the relevant assessment year. The Supreme Court explained that while section 37(1) of the 1961 Act provided for deduction of expenditure "laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business or profession in computing the income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains business or profession", what was relevant for the applicability of section 57(iii) was the purpose of expenditure, i.e., the expenditure must be laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of "making or earning income". It was not necessary that the expenditure "should fructify into any benefit by way of return in the shape of income". The Supreme Court answered the question urged in the affirmative, i.e., in favour of the assessee and against the Revenue.

15. In S.A. Builders Ltd. Vs. Commissioner of Income Tax (Appeals), Chandigarh and Another, , the assessee-company had advanced loans to its subsidiary without charging any interest. The loans were transferred out of the cash credit account of the assessee in which there was a debit balance. The Assessing Officer disallowed the proportionate interest earned on the said loan out of the total interest paid to the bank by the assessee. The disallowance for both the assessment years although partially modified by the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) was upheld by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal which observed that there was no material on record to show that the assessee had derived any business advantage by advancing the interest-free amounts to its subsidiary. The High Court upheld the order of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal.

16. Reversing the aforementioned orders and remitting the matter to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal for a fresh decision, the Supreme Court in S.A. Builders Ltd. (supra) explained that the expression "commercial expediency" was of wide import and included "such expenditure as a prudent businessman incurs for the purpose of business. The expenditure may not have been incurred under any legal obligation, yet it is allowable as business expenditure if it was incurred on grounds of commercial expediency". In the said case, what was relevant was "whether the interest-free loan was advanced to the sister company (which was a subsidiary of the assessee) as a measure of commercial expediency, and if it was, it should have been allowed." In paragraph 36 of the said case, the court observed as under (page 9 of 288 ITR):

"We agree with the view taken by the Delhi High Court in Commissioner of Income Tax Vs. Dalmia Cement (B.) Ltd., that once it is established that there was nexus between the expenditure and the purpose of the business (which need not necessarily be the business of the assessee itself), the Revenue cannot justifiably claim to put itself in the armchair of the businessman or in the position of the board of directors and assume the role to decide how much is reasonable expenditure having regard to the circumstances of the case. No businessman can be compelled to maximise its profit. The income-tax authorities must put themselves in the shoes of the assessee and see how a prudent businessman would act. The authorities must not look at the matter from their own viewpoint but that of a prudent businessman. As already stated above, we have to see the transfer of the borrowed funds to a sister concern from the point of view of commercial expediency and not from the point of view whether the amount was advanced for earning profits."

17. In CIT Vs. Taj International Jewellers, , the assessee had availed of loan from a bank and converted it into fixed deposit receipts (FDRs) on which it earned interest. This court upheld the order of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal which permitted the netting of the interest paid from the gross interest earned on the FDRs. It observed that "the interest paid was expenditure laid out and expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of making or earning the interest income".

18. In Tuticorin Alkali (supra), which has been relied upon by the Revenue, the facts were that during the financial years relevant to the assessment years 1982-83 and 1983-84, although the assessee-company had not commenced its business, a part of its borrowed funds which were not immediately required by it were invested in short-term deposits with the various banks and financial institutions. The company then sought to set off the expenditure incurred on repayment of the interest on the loans against the interest earned on the short-term deposits. It was held that while the company may be entitled to capitalise the interest paid by it during the preoperative phase, it could not claim the adjustment of the said expenditure against the income assessable as "Income from other sources". Importantly, it was noted that the company had "chosen not to keep its surplus capital idle but has decided to invest it fruitfully" and that "the fruits of such investment will clearly be of revenue nature". It was held that the expenditure incurred by the company for the purpose of setting up its business in the pre-operative phase cannot be allowed as deduction, nor can it be adjusted against any other income under any other head.

19. The legal position as regards the deduction under section 57(iii) of the Act of expenditure laid out or expended wholly or exclusively for the purpose of making or earning "Income from other sources" may be summarised as under:

(i) For the purpose of the deduction in terms of section 57(iii) the test is not whether the transaction for which the expenditure was laid out was a prudent one which resulted in ultimate gain to the assessee, but whether it was properly entered into as a part of the assessee's legitimate commercial undertaking in order indirectly to facilitate the carrying on of its business.

(ii) The expenditure may not have been incurred under any legal obligation, yet it is allowable as business expenditure if it was incurred on grounds of commercial expediency. In other words, if it is such expenditure as a prudent businessman would incur for the purpose of business.

(iii) Once it is established that there was nexus between the expenditure and the purpose of the business, riot necessarily the business of the assessee itself, the Revenue cannot put itself in the armchair of the businessman and decide how much of the expenditure is reasonable having regard to the circumstances of the case.

(iv) Where in the pre-operative phase the surplus funds borrowed for the purpose of business are kept by an assessee in fixed deposits, the interest earned thereon would be "income from other sources". The interest paid on the loan borrowed would not be permitted to be netted against such interest income in the pre-operative phase.

20. The court notes that the Revenue was under a basic misconception that the assessee was using a part of its "surplus" borrowed funds to advance a loan to SCL, its holding company. As already noticed, the assessee had not advanced a sum of Rs. 25 crores from the surplus funds already borrowed by it for the purpose of setting up its business. The facts of this case are, therefore, different from the facts in Tuticorin Alkali (supra) where the company had invested its surplus funds borrowed for the purpose of its business in fixed deposits.

21. In the present case, the advancing of loan to SCL was a business decision taken by the assessee out of commercial expediency. Further, the sanction letter of HSBC made it clear that the assessee could draw loans up to the sanctioned limit as and when needed. The sanction letter also permitted the assessee to further utilise the money borrowed to advance loans to others. The sum of Rs. 25 crores drawn by the assessee on December 24, 2001, in terms of HSBC's sanction letter was transferred to SCL on the very same date. Without the facility of credit by the HSBC, the assessee could not have advanced the loan to SCL. Therefore, there was a direct nexus between the earning of interest on the loan advanced by the assessee to SCL and payment of interest to HSBC on the loan drawn in terms of the sanction letter dated August 2, 2001. The income earned on the loan advanced to SCL was rightly offered to tax by the assessee as "Income from other sources". Since the interest paid to HSBC on the loan availed of was in the nature of an expenditure wholly and exclusively laid out for the purpose of earning the interest income, it ought to be permitted to be netted against such "Income from other sources" in terms of section 57(iii) .

22. There is also merit in the contention of the assessee that for the assessment year 2003-04, the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) and the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal mechanically followed the earlier order for the assessment year 2002-03 although the business of the assessee had commenced in June, 2002. Since this was no longer a pre-operative phase, the interest paid to HSBC would in any event have been allowable as business expenditure under section 36 of the Act for the assessment year 2003-04.

23. For the aforementioned reasons, the question framed is answered in the affirmative, i.e., in favour of the assessee and against the Revenue. The addition made by the Assessing Officer is directed to be deleted and the netting of the interest paid on the borrowed sum against the interest income earned is allowed. Consequently, the impugned order dated February 7, 2014, of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal is set aside and the appeals are allowed but in the circumstances, with no orders as to costs.
